Miss Butler, press despatches indicate, escaped without injury. She has been in France a year and a half now and much of this time has been spent in front.

Her education having been completed in Paris, Miss Butler first applied for government service as an interpreter. Born in New Haven, where her lather, Mrs. Robinson's brother, was president of the Tradesmen's National bank and executor of the Sheffield estate and otherwise prominent, she had throughout her life accustomed only to luxury and was free from most of the cares of life.

At the very first outbreak of the war she volunteered for such service as she felt she might be able to perform and sought an opportunity for imme-diate assignment for duty in France. Arrived overseas she was at first assigned to duty at one of the finest can teens outside of Paris. She made suc careful study of canteen manage ment and was so successful in other ways that she was sent to the front, where she had charge of the estab-lishing of canteens. Meanwhile she was devoting special attention to tearning about nursing, he as to fit berself for general duty, and for cometime past she has been engaged as a nurse.

Though not at all robust when she left the United States, Mas Butler in a letter received from her sometime ago by Mrs. Robinson says she has not known a day of ill health since she has been overseas, and that life back home would seem very tame to her now. Bravery and patriotism of the highest types have been marked.
